

ONLINE EXHIBITION OPPORTUNITY WITH THE JENNIFER LAUREN GALLERY

Hello. My name is Jennifer Gilbert and I run the Jennifer Lauren Gallery that is based in Manchester in the UK.

My Gallery supports disabled artists and artists who have not been to art school like Terence Wilde, whose drawing you can see here to the left.

JENNIFER LAUREN
GALLERY

I am organising an online exhibition on my website www.jenniferlaurengallery.com to show the work of 25 artists who see themselves as disabled and/or Deaf.

Two people will help me to select 25 artworks from all the work that will have been sent in. The first is Terence Wilde (pictured left) who is an artist with mental health issues. The second is Lisa Slominski (pictured left below image) who is a curator based in London, who has a keen interest in disability arts.

To have a chance to be chosen, you need to email me one piece of your artwork.

It is easy and free to do. My email address is:

info@jenniferlaurengallery.com

What to send in the email:

1. A good quality photograph of one artwork
2. The name or title of your work
3. What material you made the work with
4. Size of the work in cm (width first, then height)
5. If you want to you can say something about your work in no more than 30 words. It could be a description, or what you were inspired by or what you were thinking about.

SUNDAY 3 MAY

You need to send me this information and artwork by Sunday 3 May by 5pm.

You will then be contacted on Friday 8 May by email, to let you know if your work has been selected for the online exhibition.
